First aid kit requirements are determined through regular self-risk assessments. There are a number of factors that need to be taken into account when choosing what first aid should be provided for a workplace. Requirements will vary for all workplaces and will depend on factors such as the workplace size and location, nature of work and the number of people onsite.

Our first aid kits are designed to assist with self-assessed workplace rating of "High Risk" under the Safe Work Australia First Aid Code Of Practice. The kit features industrial quality products in robust and practical cases and colour coded components which are boldly identified in an emergency and is suitable for a wide variety of industries.

Restocking and maintaining kits is essential in any work environment. Kits must have regular checks after each use or, if the kit is not used, at least once every 12 months. Items need to be in good working order and not deteriorated, they must be within their expiry dates and all sterile products must be sealed and not been tampered with.
